THE MONIER DESIGNER LOOK
Choosing your forever home

Get the look: Designer Home

Leading builder Beechwood Homes has been building Australian houses for more than 35 years – and offers some great insights into what are the latest must-haves.

Stylist, Colour Consultant and Event Coordinator for Beechwood, Maria Ziino, says that the roof colour, style and profile is always important when it comes to building a new home, which is why she loves working with Monier.

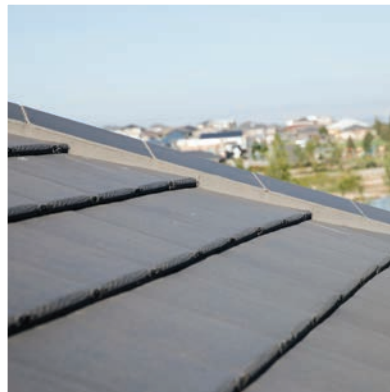

One of the most popular new homes is the Brunello, a contemporary design with dramatic touches. The Brunello on display at Sydney's Oran Park housing estate has a new Monier roof, with Cambridge concrete tiles in Soho Night and the A-line ridge; a smooth, modern look.

"I love the look of those tiles," says Maria. "I really wanted to include more Monier tiles on our homes because our customers want them."

A majority of Beechwood's customers are buying their "forever" house, so they want a design that will last them for decades, in terms of quality materials as well as a classic look.

The Cambridge tile is part of Monier's designer concrete range – designed to replicate a slate look with its 'hewn stone finish', but without the upkeep of slate.

Expected to last at least 50 years, this product also comes with Monier's innovative new C-LOC™ coating that performs up to eight times better than metal when it comes to gloss retention – meaning your home looks better for longer, thus keeping its value as it ages.

"I know it doesn't seem like a lot, but texture can determine the look of a home," Maria observes. "It doesn't have to only be the colour."

Maria's favourite Monier products are the flatter-profile tiles in a darker colour. When designing a moodboard for a new concept, Maria says she always starts with the roof.

"I guess it's probably the biggest compliment I can give Monier because I would actually pick a roof tile before I pick any other surface."
